

DELTA FARMLAND

Farmland Benefits Everyone

Conserving farmland is important so that current and future generations can continue to benefit from some of the most productive agricultural land in Canada. Besides producing high quality produce, local farmlands can reduce greenhouse gases and provide important wildlife habitat in an area that is becoming more and more urbanized. You have the opportunity to be a key player in conserving farmland close to home just by shopping for local produce and supporting initiatives that conserve farmland resources.

You can experience local farmland directly by taking a self-guided tour or buying from one of the many farms open to the public. Learn more about the importance of farmland to food production, the environment and habitat conservation at www.deltafarmland.ca, and do your part to support farmland conservation.
